

Water supply sanitation
And hygiene promotion in VietNam (SANIVAT)

Hanoi, November 2009

INVITATION

To:

The National Institute of Hygiene and Epidemiology (NIHE) with support from the Danish International Development Agency (Danida) has implemented the project “Water Supply, Sanitation, Hygiene Promotion and Health in Vietnam” (SANIVAT project) which study the health impacts of water, sanitation and hygiene interventions, human perception of hygiene and health risks, as well as different types of hygiene promotion. SANIVAT also aims to build research capacity in relevant Vietnamese partner institutions. All field research activities of SANIVAT have been taking place in Lao Cai province, which is one of the nine pilot provinces under the Rural Water Supply and Sanitation (RWSS) - National Target Program II (2006-2010).

You are cordially invited to participate in our workshop entitled “Hygiene in Ethnic Minority People in Lao Cai Province: Current Situations and Future Hygiene Promotion”. The aim of the workshop is to present the main findings from our field studies in relation to hygiene and hygiene promotion in the context of the rural water supply and sanitation program, as well as to obtain feedbacks and recommendations for our on-going and future field studies.
