

Invitation to workshop
Listen up! “How I Learn, Play and Participate”

Different individual holds different point of view towards life. What children can see in this world and how such images are captured through mind and soul of ethnic minority children particularly.

Photovoice - a way of telling stories through photos – was applied to children of H'Mong, M'Nong, Raglai and Cham ethnic groups in Lao Cai, Dak Nong and Ninh Thuan, that helps them present their sophisticated observation regarding daily life activities through hundreds of photos. Each photo tells an interesting “behind – the –scene” story. Being closer to children’s soul and thought would be result for those who have chance to look at their photos and listen to their stories.

Institute for Studies of Society, Economy and Environment (iSEE) and Oxfam would be pleased to invite interested people to workshop “Listen up! “How I learn, play and participate” to better understand soul and mind of ethnic minority children, and to be well informed before making decision affecting life of children in general and ethnic minority children in particular.
