ABOUT THE MEKONG RIVER COMMISSION

The Mekong River Commission is a regional inter-governmental agency established for the sustainable development of water and related resources in the Lower Mekong River Basin. Members are Cambodia, the Lao PDR, Thailand and Viet Nam, which signed a cooperation treaty in 1995. China and Myanmar are dialogue partners who attend MRC meetings and exchange information with the member countries. The MRC offers analysis, provides advice, conducts research and monitors the status of water and related resources for the countries' mutual benefit and the people's well-being, across the basin. It has several strategic areas of focus, which currently include agriculture, irrigation and forestry, basin development planning, environment and climate change adaptation, flood management and mitigation, drought management, fisheries, sustainable hydropower and navigation.

More information about the MRC: www.mrcmekong.org.

ABOUT THE MRC'S CLIMATE CHANGE & ADAPTATION INITIATIVE

Climate Change and Adaptation Initiative (CCAI) is a regional initiative of the MRC, aiming to understand and reduce impacts of climate change on the people and ecosystems of the Lower Mekong Basin, by assisting the MRC member countries in planning for adaptation. The CCAI supports adaptation actions in the member countries, strengthens capacity for planning and implementation, fosters cooperation and provides climate change related information so that climate change adaptation is integrated in development policies throughout the basin.
