

SEAOHUN 2022 FELLOWSHIP in Viet Nam

Strives to strengthen One Health workforce by encouraging young and mid-career professionals in human health, animal health, and environmental health to gain practical experience working on One Health issues at leading academic and research institutions, government agencies, international organizations, or international non-governmental organizations in Southeast Asia

HOST ORGANIZATION

The International Livestock Research Institute (ILRI) is Part of One CGIAR and is the only center dedicated entirely to animal agriculture research for the developing world. The institute works through extensive partnership arrangements with research and development institutions in both the developed and developing parts of the world. ILRI's research and development agenda covers a range of areas from laboratory-based biosciences to field-based research. Topics include animal productivity (health, genetics and feeds), food safety and zoonoses, livestock systems and the environment/climate change, gender and livelihoods, and policy and markets.
